

What you need to know before submitting a budget form

Before completing the form, it is important that you read this guide about how:

- we calculate what you can afford to pay off on your debt
- you complete the budget.

You can use this form if you are a private individual or have a sole proprietorship.

You can obtain answers to typical questions about the budget form at: gaeldst.dk/ability-to-pay

What does it mean to get a calculation of how much you can pay?

When submitting a budget, you ask us to calculate what you can afford to pay off on your debt. We do this based on your and our information about your household's finances.

You can get a new calculation based on the finances of your entire household if you:

- have high fixed expenses for, for example, rent, medicine or other debt to public authorities
- are or will be paying monthly instalments on your debt under an instalment payment plan, or know that we will deduct part of your salary or wage.

We may reject your request for a new calculation

We may do so if any such new calculation will not change the amount you can pay.

Will I pay less after a new calculation?

That is not certain. When we calculate the amount you can pay, we are actually calculating the amount you have at your disposal. This amount determines what you can pay on your debt after your fixed expenses have been paid. We include a disposable income amount for all members of your household, which must cover food, clothing, telephone, consumer loans and contents and accident insurance.

You must pay:

- more if you have a higher amount at your disposal. This may be the case if, for example, you have a very low rent.
- less or nothing if you have a lower or no amount at your disposal. This may be the case if, for example, you have large medication expenses.

How to complete the budget form

- You must complete all relevant fields in the form.
- You must document special needs and other income.
- You must complete the form as a solemn declaration.

You must complete the budget for your entire household. If you have a cohabiting partner or children, we will therefore also need information about them.

You do not have to provide information about your fixed expenses for, for example, food, clothing, Internet and contents and accident insurance. The reason for this is that you are to pay the expenses of the disposable income amount we calculate.

All amounts must be monthly

You must therefore convert your income and expenses into average monthly amounts.

You still have to make payments on your debt

We will continue the collection of your debt while we process your budget. You must therefore continue to pay instalments under your instalment payment plan. If you have ongoing withholding of pay, we will continue to deduct part of your salary or wage. We can also make set-offs and levy execution.

If you provide your phone number, we can call you if we need information or an explanation of your budget items.

II. Information about your cohabiting partner

We contact your cohabiting partner
 Your cohabiting partner must participate in completing the form. We use your cohabiting partner's information when we calculate what you can pay. Your cohabiting partner has rights that he or she must know about. Read about the cohabiting partner's rights on the last pages.

Cohabiting partner's full name. Civil registration (CPR) number

On what date did you acquire the same address?

Has your cohabiting partner applied for debt cancellation or debt rescheduling? Yes No

Is your cohabiting partner making payments on debt to public authorities? Yes No

Your household's monthly income

III. Monthly income

How to complete the fields concerning your monthly income

You must enter your monthly income after tax. If you have the same income every month, you enter that amount. If your income differs from month to month, you must enter the average amount for the past three months. You do this by adding up all your income for the past three months and dividing it by 3.

Example of calculation

In the past three months you may, for example, have received after tax:

- a salary of DKK 18,000 + DKK 20,000 + DKK 16,000 = DKK 54,000 / 3 = DKK 18,000
- B-income of DKK 3,600 in the quarter / 3 = DKK 1,200 per month

Your average monthly income will then be:

- DKK 18,000 + DKK 1,200 = DKK 19,200

Expenses for special needs are necessary expenses for, for example, medicine, treatments or transport related to a chronic disease or disability. You must deduct subsidies and compensations from the expense before entering the amount in the budget form. You must document the amount.

You may be entitled to a deduction for your expense for recognised faith-based communities that is equal to the church tax payable in your municipality. The expense may be a monthly contribution or a membership fee. You are not to complete the field if you are a member of the Danish National Evangelical Lutheran Church. You can see the list of recognised faith-based communities and affiliated churches at km.dk.

How to complete the fields concerning your debt

You must complete the tables with all the debt that has not been passed on to the Debt Collection Agency for collection and on which you and your cohabiting partner are making payments. This means that you must include your debt to, for example, your bank (account debt and overdraft) and instalment contracts.

If both you and your partner are liable for the debt, you must enter the full amount under your debt and tick the field 'Joint debt'. If you and your cohabiting partner have debt to more creditors than there is space for in the table, you must include information about the rest of them in a document.

Monthly income and expenses for children aged under 18 living at home

VI. Children living at home How to complete the fields concerning monthly income and expenses for children in your household

We use the information to ensure that your disposable income amount is sufficiently large to support your children aged under 18 living at home. The age of your children determines how large your disposable income amount is.

You must enter the income and expenses you have for each child aged under 18 who are living with you. You need to enter the average monthly amount.

Expenses for special needs are necessary expenses for, for example, medicine, treatments or transport related to a chronic disease or disability. You must deduct subsidies and compensations from the expense before entering the amount in the budget form. You must document the amount. If you are a single parent and you receive child support every three months from Udbetaling Danmark – Public Benefits Administration, you must enter the child support amount per child under each child.

If you and your cohabiting partner have more children than there is space for in the table, you must include information about the rest of them in a document.
